The Cornell Law School
JD-LLM Degree Program and Curricular Offerings
Course Offerings 2014-15 Academic Year

Cornell Law School offers an opportunity to Cornell J.D. students to earn both a J.D. degree and an LL.M. degree in three years, including one session at the Cornell Law School-Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne Summer Institute of International and Comparative Law in Paris.

The program leads to the joint degree of “J.D. -LL.M.”. This document is designed to give you a statement of the requirements and mechanics of the program.

Application process:

Cornell J.D. students may apply to be admitted to the joint degree program upon initial application to the Law School or after matriculation, provided application is made before completion of their first year.

Degree Requirements:

The J.D./LL.M program requires 20 upperclass credits in international and comparative law (in this document, the “20 required credits”), in addition to the credits required for the J.D. degree. This means that students must complete 104 total credits, rather than the 84 required for the J.D.

The 20 required credits must include:

- Three specifically-designated courses—Public International Law; Comparative Legal Studies and Conflict of Laws
- Participation in the Paris Summer Institute (students must receive at least four credits)

The 20 required credits may include:

- A thesis option, which requires satisfactory completion of a five credit thesis
- Up to four of the twelve language class credits available to all J.D. students
- Courses that are taken—in accordance with the law school’s rules and regulations and if related to international, comparative, or foreign law—in other divisions of Cornell University, including its area studies programs (East Asia, South Asia, Southeast Asia, Institute for African Development, Latin American Studies and the Institute for European Studies)
- Approved courses that are taken by participants in the law school’s Semester Abroad Program, in which J.D./LL.M. students may earn up to sixteen credits for study at an approved foreign law school or faculty

Additional Program Requirements:

- Students must maintain an overall grade-point average of at least 2.8 to be awarded the LL.M. degree at graduation.
- In no event may a J.D./LL.M. student receive a total of more than 12 credits toward the required 20 credits from summer/winter intersession courses, including credits earned from the Paris Summer Program.
- Students in the program must comply with the credit hour and degree requirements for the Cornell J.D. degree in addition to completing an additional 20 credit hours for the LL.M. degree as proscribed above.
- JD/LLM students will be allowed to take a maximum of 20 credits per semester during the second and third years. No exceptions can be made to the 20 credit maximum.
Courses:
Students interested in the JD-LLM degree will have the following courses to choose from during the 2014-15 academic year. Students are urged to speak with Laura Spitz, Associate Dean of International Affairs to discuss course selection before doing their pre-registration.

Students may enroll in similar courses in other divisions of the University (with approval of the Associate Dean for International Affairs). In addition, supervised writing projects in International or Comparative Law may also count towards the specialization (again, with the approval of the Associate Dean for International Affairs).

Note: Third-year students in the program receive priority in admission to international offerings of problem courses and seminars. We expect to be able to continue the policy that membership in the program entitles a student to take any course in the program group, regardless of other problem courses taken.
