A Three-Year JD/MBA Dual Degree

WHAT IS THE THREE-YEAR JD/MBA?
The Cornell JD/MBA is a three-year dual degree program jointly sponsored by Cornell Law School and the Samuel Curtis Johnson Graduate School of Management. The program is designed for students who are interested in careers where study in both the fields of law and management is beneficial. Some career interests of JD/MBA students include:

- Corporate Law
- Entrepreneurship
- Tax
- International Trade
- Finance
- Management Consulting

HOW DO I APPLY TO THE JD/MBA PROGRAM?
Applicants must apply to, and be accepted by, both Cornell Law School and Johnson. Students may also apply to the MBA program during the first year of Law School. All students who enter the three-year JD/MBA program must have a minimum 3.40 grade point average during the fall semester of their first year in the Law School. For 2016 applicants, the GMAT/GRE application requirement has been waived.

CURRICULUM REQUIREMENTS
For students pursuing the three-year JD/MBA program, requirements include:

72 credits at Cornell Law School
- 32 credits of first-year required coursework
- Business Organizations must be taken in the second year
- Federal Income Taxation must be taken in the second or third year
- At least nine credits of Law electives must be taken in each of four semesters after the first year (may include Law/Johnson cross-listed courses)

47 credits at Johnson
- 22 credits core required coursework
- 25 credits of Johnson electives

In the three-year JD/MBA program, all courses for credit must be taken at either Law or Johnson. Students are eligible to graduate with honors at both Law and Johnson; the grades used to determine honors will be only those for classes taken at the school granting the honors (cross-listed courses count in a student’s grade point average at both Law and Johnson).

Students will graduate from the Law School with his or her entering Law School class. Graduation from Johnson will be at the same time as graduation from the Law School.

REGISTRATION AND FINANCIAL AID DETAILS

Students pursuing the three-year JD/MBA program will be registered with and pay tuition to Cornell Law School during their first and third years of study, for a total of four registered semesters. All financial aid including scholarships and loans will be determined by Cornell Law School during those semesters.

Further, Law School tuition will be calibrated so that it matches the credit-hour cost of the existing four-year JD/MBA program (i.e., the equivalent of five semesters of Law School tuition will be charged during the four semesters that the student is registered at the Law School – the first two semesters at the normal Law School tuition rates, and the second two semesters at 150 percent of the normal Law School tuition rates).

Students will be registered with and pay tuition to Johnson during their first year summer and second year of study, for a total of three registered semesters. All financial aid including scholarships and loans will be determined by Johnson during those three semesters.
