h h

INTRO 16-3 (h)

ARINELLI, MAZUR, HOGUES, MILLS & DIXON AS AMENDED WHEREAS, it is estimated that one in four American women experience domestic violence h within their lifetimes; and h

WHEREAS, three women and one man are murdered by their spouses or partners in the United h States every day; and h

WHEREAS, domestic violence costs the United States more than $5.8 billion each year; and h

WHEREAS, police and sheriff departments, city and local police agencies, courts and other local h government entities constitute the first line of defense against domestic violence; and h

WHEREAS, the aforementioned costs of domestic violence are principally borne by the criminal h justice system and police agencies; and h

WHEREAS, the world community and leaders within the United States recognize domestic h violence as a human rights issue; and h

WHEREAS, by recognizing domestic violence as a human rights issue with very deep, broad and h costly ramifications that include, but are not limited to, expenses shouldered by taxpayers and businesses – h and more importantly the human cost of loss of life or physical injury; and h

h

WHEREAS, this cost is dramatically illustrated by The Gonzales Case: A Human Rights h Approach to Combating Domestic Violence, which describes the terrible consequences to wit, the loss of h life of three children, when a local government does not enforce an order of protection; and h

WHEREAS, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR), a judicial body of the h Organization of American States (OAS) found that the United States was responsible for human rights h violations related to this case when it maintained that the local government had no mandatory duty to h enforce protective orders; and h

WHEREAS, the IACHR was authorized in 1965 to accept petitions regarding specific cases of h domestic human rights violations as part of its mission to promote the observance and defense of human h rights in the Americas; and h

WHEREAS, this decision allows advocates and policy makers in the United States new avenues h to combat domestic violence; and h

WHEREAS, it is fitting and proper to bring attention to this important public policy issue in h conjunction with our community's upcoming observance of the Month of October as Domestic Violence h Awareness Month. h

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT h

RESOLVED, that this Honorable Body recognize that freedom from domestic violence is a h fundamental human right; and be it further h

RESOLVED, that the Erie County Legislature commend the policies and actions of local and h state police agencies that bear the primary responsibility of securing this fundamental human right on h behalf of their citizens; and be it further h

RESOLVED, that representatives from The WomenhChildren and Social Justice Clinic at SUNY h
Buffalo Law School be invited to a future meeting of the Erie County Legislature's Health and Human h Services Committee to discuss the Gonzales case to illustrate the importance of this public policy issue; h and be it further h
